Dean Melanie Leslie Appoints Professor Saurabh Vishnubhakat to the Faculty

"We are very excited to add Professor Vishnubhakat's teaching and research strength to our robust program in intellectual property," said Dean Leslie. "I have no doubt his passion and innovation as a scholar and teacher will enhance Cardozo's leadership role in IP and administrative law and provide tremendous benefits to our students."

Professor Jessica Roth Writes CNN.com Op-ed About Elizabeth Holmes' Guilty Verdict

"Holmes elided the distinction between reality and optimistic projections in a particularly egregious manner," says Roth. She also commented on the verdict in The New York Times.

Professor Kate Shaw Comments in The Guardian on the Jan. 6 Investigation

"It's pretty clear that these documents are serious documents that shed light on the president's activities on January 6 and that may be quite damaging for Trump," Shaw says.

Professor Deborah Pearlstein Discusses, in Politico, Election Reform

Pearlstein suggested some "low-hanging fruit" changes to lawmakers, in Politico, that include raising the bar for substantive challenges to electoral votes and establishing a remedy if the House and Senate disagree on how to resolve a disputed set of electors.

Professor Richard Weisberg Writes Op-ed About Mike Pence in The Hill

"This coming Jan. 6 is a key date for Pence. Who better to declare the end of the Trump era on that anniversary?" writes Weisberg.

Cardozo Welcomes Jane-Roberte Sampeur as New ITAP Director

ITAP is a cornerstone of Cardozo's practical skills curriculum. In this two-week immersion course held each January, students learn cutting-edge strategies for courtroom litigation under the instruction of leading jurists and lawyers from across the country. Sampeur says, "For many students, ITAP is one of the most memorable experiences of their legal education."

Professor Pamela Foohey Quoted in MarketWatch on 2021 Bankruptcy Filings

"There are many forces that are pushing people to not file bankruptcy right now and definitely throughout 2021," says Foohey.
