Today At Cardozo

Tuesday, January 18, 2022

Hello, Students!

Welcome back! We hope that everyone had a wonderful winter break. We would like to take this time to remind you of the process for submitting requests for

Today at Cardozo.

To have your club's event advertised, please send announcements in plain text format. Please send all requests no later than 48 hours prior to the 10:00 AM email you would like it posted. When sending your request, please make sure that the following items are included in your text:

- Title of Event
- Date
- Location (Please be sure the location of your event is confirmed with the Office of Special Events before placing your Today at Cardozo text.)
- Link to Register or Attend
- Sponsoring SBA group
- Contact email

Each announcement may be included twice in the Today at Cardozo email - once under the “Upcoming Events” section and once under the “Today at Cardozo” section. When sending any text, please specify the two dates you would like them to be included and its corresponding section. Lastly, the announcement can only go out once a day so please be sure to review the text before sending the request.

Please don't hesitate to contact us with any questions that you may have.

Best of luck with the new semester,

Sofia & Christine

Cardozo Law Review's Annual Symposium

The Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law, the Cardozo Law Review, and the Floersheimer Center for Constitutional Democracy are pleased to host a voter rights and electoral reform symposium.

Inspired by the tumultuous 2020 presidential election, the conference brings together leading scholars and advocates to discuss the evolution of voter suppression laws, modern-day gerrymandering, and innovative strategies for electoral reform.

The symposium will be held on Thursday, January 27, 2022, over Zoom and will proceed in three parts:

- (1) The Evolution of Voter Suppression, at 10:15 a.m.
- (2) Redistricting After the 2020 Census: Gerrymandering and Misrepresentation, at 12:45 p.m.
- (3) Electoral Reform, at 2:30 p.m.

Please direct all questions about the event to Gianna Zapata.
