Dean Melanie Leslie Appoints Professor Emmanuel Arnaud to the Faculty

"I am pleased to welcome Professor Arnaud to Cardozo," said Dean Leslie. "His scholarly research includes important work within criminal procedure, race and the law, and the U.S. territories. I know he will be an excellent addition to our outstanding faculty."

Cardozo Hosts Annual Immersion Courses

This month, Cardozo hosted several simulation courses as part of the practical experience curriculum, including the Intensive Trial Advocacy Program (ITAP), the Intensive Mediation Advocacy Program (IMAP) and the Intensive Transactional Lawyering Program (ITRANS).

Professor Jessica Roth Comments to CBS News on Trump Immunity Claims

"This threshold question that the court has to decide is whether or not what former President Trump did on January 6th, and then the lead up to January 6th, was part of his official duties, recognizing that the Supreme Court has said that courts should construe those duties broadly," says Roth. She also spoke to Bloomberg Law about the Maxwell trial.

Professor Ekow Yankah Writes About the Fourth Amendment in American Constitution Society's SCOTUS Review

"If the Supreme Court cannot readily modify policing in each city and hamlet, it is unique in its ability to establish binding nationwide Fourth Amendment rulings and set minimum guarantees on the limits of policing power," Yankah writes.

Professor Kate Shaw Comments on ABC About Vaccine Mandates and SCOTUS

"This is a very conservative, newly constituted court that is pretty skeptical of federal power writ large, so I think there's a good chance that one or both of these policies may be struck down," says Shaw.
