Yeshiva University President Rabbi Dr. Ari Berman Authors Op-ed in The Wall Street Journal

"Our history has taught us a lot about resilience and adaptability. It has infused us with a set of values that gives us an enduring mission and purpose. In Hebrew, the root of the word for victory is the same as the word for eternity. By playing for eternity, we always walk off the court as champions," writes Rabbi Berman.

Professor Matthew Wansley Speaks with CNBC about Due Diligence and Startups

"There isn't a lot of investigation into private companies," Wansley says, "and there's not a lot of transparency."

Professor Jessica Roth Discusses the Maxwell Post-Trial Developments on Bloomberg Law

"The problem that has been raised by these recent revelations by two jurors is the concern that they may have harbored a bias against Maxwell based on their own prior experiences as victims of sexual abuse-and so what the court is going to be trying to determine is whether essentially these jurors should not have been seated because of those prior experiences," Roth says.
