A Climate Conversation: Environmental Protection Rollbacks Under Trump
Monday, February 10, 2020

5 PM

Room 1008

Dinner will be served

Please join us for a conversation about the current state of environmental regulation under the Trump administration with Environmental and Administrative Law Professor Michael Herz.

Under Trump, over 95 administrative rules are currently under amendment or proposal, all mutually operating to strip away the current level of environmental protection. Perhaps most worrisome are the proposed changes to the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) which would remove climate change as a required factor in assessing the viability of major federal projects. Find out what this means and how YOU can publicly comment on the rule by joining us for dinner and conversation.

Please join the Women's Law Initiative at our first General Body Meeting of the Semester on Monday, February 10, from 12- 1pm in the 5th Floor Faculty Lounge. Bring your own lunch and get ready to chat about the future of Roe v. Wade with a conservative judiciary. We'll also vote on our updated Constitution, discuss our upcoming Spring Reception, and get the inside scoop on journals!

All are welcome.

Brown Bag Lunch and General Body Meeting

If/When/How: Lawyering for Reproductive Justice General Body Meeting

Join us for our Spring General Body Meeting to discuss future events and introduce our new executive board members!

Wednesday, February 12
12-1pm
Room 423

Please join us on Wednesday, February 12th from 12:00 - 1:00 in 9SEM for a student-led discussion! Lunch will be served.

Wednesday's discussion will be the following: Suppose that a device is invented that allows one to go back in time by overwriting the consciousness and memories of the older version of yourself. The old version of the future is then gone as though it never existed, aside from the memories of the time traveler. A new future will develop based on the present timeline.

First: suppose that a device is invented that can tell when an individual has traveled back in time (and who they are) but no other information. How should we think about this? Is it murder of their past self? Of their entire timeline?

Second: suppose that we can tell what they did in the now deleted timeline. Should we find individuals liable for actions committed in said timeline? If so, under what theory?"

The Jacob Burns Center for Ethics in the Practice of Law invites you to:

If Multidistrict Litigation is the New Normal, Do Lawyers Need New Rules?

Jacob Burns Moot Court Room
Thursday, February 13, 2020
5:30 - 7:00 p.m.
Reception to follow

Originally established in 1968 via federal statute, multidistrict litigation is now reshaping the legal landscape in the United States. According to a recent study, at the end of 2018, MDLs made up approximately 52% of the civil caseload at the federal level. MDLs are not class actions, but they give a lot of power to a small group of lawyers. This panel will discuss this "new normal" from the perspective of defendants, plaintiffs, and their lawyers. Is it sustainable? Can our current approach to legal ethics handle this world, or does something need to change?

Panelists:

Elizabeth Chamblee Burch, Callaway Chair of Law, University of Georgia School of Law;
Author, Mass Tort Deals: Backroom Bargaining in Multidistrict Litigation

Sheila Birnbaum, Partner, Dechert LLP; Co-Chair of Dechert's Product Liability and Mass
Torts Practice

Howard Erichson, Professor of Law, Fordham University School of Law

Chris Seeger '90, Founding Partner, Seeger Weiss LLP; Cardozo Distinguished Alumnus of the Year 2009

Moderator: Anthony Sebok, Professor of Law, Cardozo School of Law
