When the United States of America was founded, the ideals of freedom and equality did not apply to all people. These are the stories of the brave Americans who fought to right the nation's wrongs and enshrine the values we hold most dear into the Constitution — with liberty and justice for all.

Professor Sam Weinstein's Op-Ed in Promarket Assesses Smoking Gun Evidence in Facebook, Google Antitrust Cases

"For an antitrust plaintiff, the most powerful pieces of evidence often can be the defendant's own documents. Customer and competitor testimony can be helpful to understand the competitive impact of a merger or specific conduct, though both customers and rivals may have biases that color their views of the case," writes Weinstein.

Professor Chris Buccafusco Addresses Copyright Issues and the Sea Shanty Craze in Business Insider Op-Ed

"The 19th-century sailors' songs that blended European and African melodies and rhythms with lyrics about life at sea are now the internet's biggest musical sensation. And their popularity shows us what's great about contemporary culture and creativity, and what's wrong with modern copyright law," writes Buccafusco.

Professor Peter Markowitz Pens Op-Ed on Unclogging the Immigration Court System in The Hill

"The president has promised to use the first 100 days of his presidency ... toward a fairer and more functional immigration enforcement system. To ensure the success ... [he] must include a focus on the nation's immigration court system and dismiss ... non priority cases," writes Markowitz, who was also quoted in USA Today on the matter.

Professor Ed Zelinsky Discusses Pandemic Tax Initiatives in Law360

"If you said to me, 'What could the Biden administration do that is really COVID related?' I think the most important thing that the COVID issue has taught us are the tax consequences of remote work," says Zelinsky.
