The Israeli Supreme Court Project at Cardozo Law presents:

The Israeli Supreme Court Confronts the Brave New World of Reproductive Technology

Who is a parent? How many parents can a child have? Do people have rights not to parent? Does such a right trump the right to parent? Are there rights to grandparent or to reproduce posthumously? Courts confronting the brave new world of reproductive technologies and, with it, changing social practices, have been forced to rethink traditional notions of parenthood. The Israeli Supreme Court has been exceptionally active in this area, often bringing to bear a uniquely Jewish perspective on these questions. This panel will highlight the Court's most recent cases, discuss the fascinating relationship of science, law, and culture in this fast-moving area, and draw comparisons with U.S. Law.

CLE credit has been applied for.
