Derrick Hamilton, Deputy Director of Perlmutter Center for Legal Justice, Appears on ABA Journal Podcast

“What I teach [the students at Cardozo] more than anything else is that their job as lawyers is to change the criminal justice system,” Hamilton said. “We have an obligation to not just become lawyers but to improve the system... We should be involved in change.”

Professor Edward Zelinsky Speaks to Washington Post About Cryptocurrency Gains on Tax Returns

“People can play games with [cryptocurrency] and not have to pay any taxes,” Zelinsky said. “It’s incredibly unfair to the vast majority of law-abiding taxpayers when the IRS is crippled. I think that’s the problem with bitcoin — the tax evasion has become normatively accepted.”

Professor Saurabh Vishnubhakat Quoted in National Law Journal

Vishnubhakat said that after several years of wrestling with constitutional issues arising from the 2011 America Invents Act, “the court is starting to bring the doctrinal content of IP back into the picture.”
