The Cardozo Data Law Initiative presents:

eDiscovery and the New Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, One Year Later

To face the eDiscovery data deluge, the most significant amendments to discovery under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in a generation went into effect on December 1, 2015. One year later, are you prepared for how your practice could (and should) be changing? Are you prepared to explain these changes to your clients and incorporate them in your dialogue with opposing counsel and the court? As in-house counsel, do you understand how expectations and even budgeting might be changing? Using a new educational toolkit assembled by the Sedona Conference, the panelists will present the 2015 Amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, with practical advice on implementing proportionality, propounding and responding to document requests, and avoiding sanctions, as well as thoughts about what lessons can be drawn from experiences under the new rules over the last year.
