Why Florida Copied its “Don’t Say Gay” Bill from Hungary & What It Means for Democracy in the United States

Tuesday, November 1 at 5:00 p.m.

Jacob Burns Moot Court Room and Zoom

On the eve of mid-term elections in which polls find large majorities of Americans worried about the future of U.S. democracy, scholars and journalists are tracking growing interest here in the successful path of autocratic leaders abroad. Do once-democratic countries like Hungary offer American populists a meaningful roadmap for reforming the structures of U.S. democratic governance and constitutional law?
