The Show Must Go On: Navigating Rights for Broadway Productions

This unique panel of legal and theater professionals will discuss the complex process of putting on a Broadway musical. Topics will include the respective roles of authors, producers, and lawyers; the nature of the legal rights required and from whom, basic terms and conditions related to the acquisition of these rights, and how these rights facilitate or impede creative output; and pitfalls to be avoided. Throughout, the focus will be on the delicate balance between protecting legal rights and promoting creativity, and how legal issues look not just from the perspective of the lawyer but also from that of the writer and producer.
