100 Days of Dissent: Unpacking the Ongoing Indian Farmers' Protests
April 12, 12:00PM ET

Register Below

For months, Indian farmers have been protesting, building a resistance movement against harmful agricultural law reforms that seek to strip them of essential protections and open the door to multinational agribusiness investment. The new laws will make farmers' goods vulnerable to private traders, essentially leaving them unprotected under a free market mechanism. These actions have caused a strong mobilization of opposition with millions of farmers concerned that their livelihoods are at risk as they will lose their ability to provide for their families. Many farmers are also members of the Sikh/Punjabi community and have been targets of violence and discriminatory laws. CLIHHR's discussion with Vinay Sreenivasa, community attorney/advocate with the Alternative Law Forum, will focus on the agricultural reform laws, the laws' impact on human rights, and how the laws are a continuation of discrimination against the Sikh/Punjabi minority community in India.

Speakers

Vinay Sreenivasa is a community attorney/advocate with the Alternative Law Forum. His areas of interests include Urban Transport, Urban Poverty, Informal Sectors and Urban Governance. He has also been part of initiatives promoting Free and Open Source Software in the government. Vinay holds an engineering degree and was in the IT industry until 2007. His research and reflections have been shared across multiple media outlets. Vinay's recent article in the 'Logical Indian' spotlights how India's farm laws may lead to the collapse of the sector that is already in a precarious situation.

Ramya Jawahar Kudekallu is Visiting Instructor of Clinical Law at Cardozo's Benjamin B. Ferencz Human Rights and Atrocity Prevention Clinic and CLIHHR's Telford Taylor Teaching Fellow. Her work focuses on the rights of minorities and atrocity prevention through international intervention. In 2018, Ramya graduated from Fordham School of Law with an LLM in International Law and Justice. Later that year, she secured the Crowley Fellowship with the Leitner Center for International Law. She has taught a Human Rights Scholarship class and has conducted research on labor, gender-based discrimination and access to justice.

Framing Britney Spears: Adult Guardianship and an Artist's Control Over Her Work

What's a guardianship/conservatorship and how can a leading star in the music business be under a court order that doesn't let her make personal and financial decisions for herself? This panel focuses on the case of Britney Spears, its implications for disability rights, and the questions it raises about artists' control over their work.

NYC Right to Counsel: Housing Rights and Justice
Monday, April 12 at 12 pm via Zoom

The Tenants-Attorney Pipeline Committee of the Right to Counsel Coalition (RTC) in New York City is hosting an informational event for Cardozo students regarding the housing movement, right to counsel in housing eviction proceedings, and the numerous job opportunities presented by the creation of this new civil right in many cities across the country.

In order to meet the increasing demand for passionate and skilled attorneys in New York City (and elsewhere), RTC is working to connect, and recruit law students across the country, especially those who come from communities impacted by gentrification and displacement, to join the movement. RTC is also eager to also connect with local movements in your community, to build a strong network defending tenants' rights.

The discussion will be led by:

Dana Christiansen

Senior Attorney, Riseboro Community Partnership

Steven Koch

Supervising Attorney, Civil Action Practice, The Bronx Defenders

Molly M. Rug

Civil Defense Practice, Neighborhood Defender Service of Harlem

Lauren Springer

Tenant Leader, Catholic Migration Services

Please join us to discuss the rewarding and exciting career opportunities in housing law in New York!

If you have questions, please contact Alissa Bernstein.

The past year has been extremely difficult for everyone. The Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) community especially has faced a horrifying surge of violence. During this time, there were nearly 4,000 anti-Asian hate incidents reported to Stop AAPI Hate.

Xenophobia and racism against Asian Americans can be traced back to the late 19th and early 20th centuries, when anti-Asian sentiment was fueled by economic downturn, war, and disease. That history includes: the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882; the detention of Japanese Americans during WW2; blaming the declining US auto industry in the 1980s on Asian Americans that led to the death of Vincent Chin; and attacking South Asian Americans, Muslim Americans, and Middle Eastern Americans after 9/11. What has happened and continues to happen is unacceptable. It must stop. Please join Cardozo APALSA on April 13, 2021, at 6:30PM for a panel discussing the rise of violence towards the AAPI community as well as how we can move forward while raising awareness about these issues.

The discussion will be moderated by our very own Dean of Students, Jenn Kim.

The esteemed panelists include: Assistant Professor at The New School for Public Engagement, Professor Lei Ping; Board Member and Chair of AABANY Issues Committee, Chris M. Kwok, Esq.; and OCA-GH Organizer and Programs Associate, Audrey Pan."

Kill Switch: The Rise of the Modern Senate - A Book Talk with Author Adam Jentleson

Wednesday, April 14, 2021
4:30 - 5:30 PM

This event is co-sponsored by the Floersheimer Center for Constitutional Law and the Cardozo Law Review.

Adam Jentleson, former Deputy Chief of Staff to Senator Harry Reid (D-NV), argues in Kill Switch: The Rise of the Modern Senate and the Crippling of American Democracy that the filibuster has been employed for decades by a tenacious minority to ensure structural minority rule in the Senate - and by extension, of the nation. By framing the filibuster as a modern tool used to transform the Senate and shape the country, Jentleson makes the case for its reform.

Join Floersheimer Center Co-Director Deborah Pearlstein for a timely conversation with Jentleson about his book, the filibuster, and structural reform in our political system.

Adam Jentleson is currently the Executive Director at Battle Born Collective, a columnist for GQ, and a frequent political commentator on MSNBC.

Attendees may purchase a copy of Jentleson's book
