Professor Kate Shaw Co-Authors Essay for The New York Times on the Importance of the ERA and Calls on Congress to Pass It

“Congress should activate its full powers as the director of the amendment process and, in the name of both sex equality and the possibility of making ‘a more perfect union,’ acquaint Americans with the possibility of changing the Constitution,” Shaw wrote.

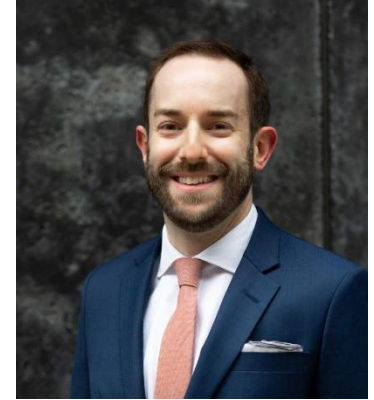

Gothamist and WNYC Cover Work of Professor Mauricio Noroña and Immigration Clinic Students to Bring NY Man Deported 20 Years Ago Back to U.S.

“One of the most fulfilling experiences I've had working in the clinic was meeting Lorenzo and supervising the students who worked on his case,” said Noroña. “Despite the injustices he had endured in his life, Lorenzo remained relentlessly optimistic. This inspired the students to take on the highly complex factual and legal puzzle to secure his return.”

Professor Jacob Noti-Victor Speaks to Law360 About Ed Sheeran Trial Decision, and How Mashups Aren't a 'Smoking Gun'

"But from what I understand, this is the kind of thing that musicians [and] songwriters love playing around with — especially because with pop music, there are so many common chord [progressions] that occur," Noti-Victor said. "I wouldn't have read it as a smoking gun, and I'm glad the jury didn't either."

Professor Young Ran (Christine) Kim Quoted in Bloomberg Tax About the Battle Over Taxing Digital Ads

"Maryland has said that it is going to use the tax revenue for educational programs, and I think this is a very good policy to achieve a more distributional goal for the state government," Kim said.

Professor Anthony Sebok Speaks to The Hill on SCOTUS Ethics Reforms

"I think to most people who think seriously about democratic norms, it is simply absurd that anyone who occupies the office of the judge does not conform to an articulated set of codes of ethics," Sebok said.

Professor Deborah Pearlstein and 3L John Dellamore, in Just Security, Write About Montana's Attempted TikTok Ban

“Last month, Montana became the first U.S. state to pass a bill banning TikTok from operating within its borders,” Pearlstein and Dellamore wrote. “If Governor Greg Gianforte signs some version of the bill, it will become the first statewide ban in the country to take direct aim at the popular social media app, which various U.S. government officials have warned poses a serious national security threat.”

Professor Jessica Roth Appears on AC360 to Discuss Testimony in E. Jean Carroll's Case Against Former President Donald Trump

“I think it does [make sense that Trump will not testify],” Roth said. “I think he would be a very, very challenging witness, and he has lots of exposure in all his other cases. I think from his attorney's perspective, it makes a lot of sense that he would not testify.”
