Professor Kate Levine Quoted on CBC Radio on Police's Blue Wall of Support in Criminal Cases

The so-called blue wall is a well-established concept in policing. Professor Kate Levine told CBC Radio, "There's just tremendous organizational solidarity within police departments, which means they protect each other and it means they lie for each other. There's a phrase called 'testilying,' which was invented to describe police lying on the stand, police committing perjury." She also spoke to Twin Cities PBS.
