Report: NY Immigrant Family Unity Project Has Tremendous Impact On Reducing Deportations; Professor Markowitz Recognized For Role In Project's Creation

A new report co-authored by Professor Peter Markowitz concludes that the NY Immigrant Family Unity Project, which provides free legal assistance to immigrants facing deportation, has improved success rates for these immigrants by 1,000 percent.

Professor Markowitz Speaks to Vox On Multi-City Effort To Give Every Detained Immigrant A Lawyer

In the article, Professor Peter Markowitz talks about what it was like as a young immigration lawyer at the Varick Street courtroom: "People brought in, in shackles, with their feet and hands shackled to their waist, often not understanding the language of the proceedings, having no idea of the legal norms that were controlling their fate - being deported hand over fist."

Professor Sterk Comments On Contentious Bedford Union Armory Development In The Commercial Observer

The redevelopment of the armory in Crown Heights includes a mix of rentals, condominiums, office space for nonprofits and a recreational center. "When you want to do an affordable housing project with a [for-profit] developer, you have to see what the developer can stand," Professor Sterk said.

Adjunct Professor Michael Wildes Weighs In On Diversity Lottery Program on PIX11 News

The interview followed the most recent terror attack in New York City committed by 29-year-old Sayfullo Habibullaevich Saipov, who had immigrated to the United States in 2010 under the diversity visa lottery program.
