Professor Jacob Noti-Victor Speaks with Associated Press About Similarities Between Threads and Twitter

Despite Threads’ similarities to Twitter, Noti-Victor said, “Just the idea of creating a social media platform involving text [is] certainly not something that would be a trade secret.”

Professor Michael Pollack Pens Op-Ed For Slate On Benefits of Having Department of Sidewalks

“Local departments of sidewalks would shift power and financial costs away from adjacent property owners, restoring efficient, equitable, and accountable maintenance. And they would consolidate all the functions currently scattered across agencies, creating more coherent and navigable regulation,” Pollack wrote.

Professor Edward Zelinsky's Case Against New York State Regarding Taxing Remote Workers Cited In Law360

"New York's imposition of tax under the convenience rule during the COVID-19 pandemic is under challenge in the courts. Edward A. Zelinsky, longtime tax professor at Yeshiva University's Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law in Manhattan, has sued New York for taxing him for work done at his Connecticut home while the Cardozo campus was under state orders to close," Sanjay Talwani wrote.
