Monday, August 31, 2020

---

Hello Students!

Welcome back! We hope you are doing well.

We would like to take this time to remind you of the process for submitting requests for the Today at Cardozo email.

Please send all requests no later than two days prior to the date you would like it posted. When sending your request, please make sure that the following items are included in your text before the request is placed:

Title of Event

Date and Time

Link to Register or Attend

Sponsoring SBA group

Contact email

Each text may be included twice in the Today at Cardozo email. Once under the “Upcoming Events” section and once under the “Today at Cardozo” section. When sending any text please specify the two dates you would like it to be included and its corresponding section. Lastly, the announcement can only go out once a day so please be sure to review the text before sending the request.

Please don't hesitate to contact us with any questions that you may have.

Best of luck with the new semester,

Becky & Emma

Cardozo NLG DisOrientation 2020: Movement Lawyering with the NLG

Date: Wednesday, September 2 @ 4pm ET/1 pm PT

Description: Join NLG legal practitioners and educators for a webinar on movement lawyering and how to use the law to support social movements! These skills are often not taught in law schools, so Guild members will offer an overview of what it means to be a movement lawyer and examples of careers that are in line with these principles.

Speakers:

- Cait De Mott Grady (she/her) [Moderator] is the outgoing NLG Student National Vice President who works as a public defender in Detroit and loves growing giant sunflowers. Cait's movement lawyering framework and experience are grounded in her lifetime of involvement in the Catholic Worker movement and the anti-war and anti-nuclear movement.
- Azadeh Shahshahani (she/her) is Legal & Advocacy Director at Project Southand a past president of the NLG. Azadeh has worked for 15 years in the U.S. South to protect & defend the human rights of immigrants and Muslim, Middle Eastern, and South Asian communities.
- Natasha Lycia Ora Bannan (she/her) is Senior Counsel at LatinoJustice PRLDEF, a national racial justice and immigrants' rights organization, and is past President of the National Lawyers Guild.
- Elena L. Cohen (she/her) is the current president of the NLG, and a partner at a small firm focusing on the needs of LGBTQ people and people who have experienced police misconduct.
- Sarah David Heydemann (she/her) is an organizer turned lawyer who has worked in workers' rights for many years, in labor unions, worker centers, civil rights non-profits and firms. She is currently Senior Counsel at the National Women's Law Center, focusing on workplace justice issues.

Cardozo NLG DisOrientation: Staying Radical in Law School

Date: Thursday, September 3 @ 4pm ET / 1pm PT

Description: While many people are drawn to law school initially to further social justice, law students encounter intense pressure to choose careers that have little potential to serve these ideals. The combination of student debt, the culture and pedagogy of legal education, and the discouragement of political analyses in law school undermine student goals of becoming movement lawyers. This webinar will feature NLG members who explore the practices and culture of law school to help new (and current) law students navigate a path that allows them to stay radical throughout the course of their legal education and beyond!

Speakers

- Luna Martinez (she/her) [Moderator]: NLG National Student Vice President
- Pooja Gehi (she/her): NLG Executive Director. Pooja graduated from American University's Washington College, where she chaired her law school's NLG chapter.
- Aneesa Khan (she/her): Assistant Public Defender in the Baltimore City Juvenile Division and NLG Mid-Atlantic Regional Vice President. Aneesa helped start the student NLG chapter at University of Baltimore Law and received the 2017 C.B. King Law Student Award.
- Ray Rojas (he/him): Attorney in private practice and NLG Texoma Regional Vice-President.
- Natsu Saito (she/her): Law professor, activist, author of Settler Colonialism, Race and the Law: Why Structural Racism Persists
