3L Noa Gutow-Ellis Pens Letter to the Editor in The New York Times on U.S. Immigration System

“There should be no place for immigration enforcement tactics that deliberately and seriously injure people,” Gutow-Ellis wrote.

Professor Andrea Schneider Speaks to Los Angeles Times on Why Some Productions Are Continuing During Writers and Actors Strikes

“They are also trying to demonstrate that there is a way for studios to make successful products even if they pay actors according to the wage structure that SAG has asked for and that the industry will not fall apart,” Schneider said.

Professor Jessica Roth Speaks to TIME Magazine on Trump

Indictments

“This is going to be a challenging case,” Roth said. “Even more challenging to present and win than the case in Florida involving the documents. There will be a great deal of evidence and a very complicated story that will need to be told to explain the crimes and to explain the former president's conduct. It's much more sprawling than the charges that were brought in Florida that are, in a sense, narrow in their scope.” She also appeared on CNN and PBS Newshour to discuss the case.
