Cardozo Law Revue Activity Meeting: Join the Cast!

We are currently cooking up comic scenes and songs for the community's entertainment.
Now is the perfect time to join.

If you are interested (a) to show off a talent, (b) to join the cast for the Spring Semester, (c) to contribute writing, (d) to volunteer as crew, or (e) to just otherwise avert scholastic meltdown, join us for skit staging, singing, and improv.

Be a part of Cardozo's longstanding tradition, and most importantly, have fun!

Today at Room 423
7 pm

Food will be served.

Join FIRE (For Immigrants' Rights and Equality) for:
A Panel Discussion on Immigration at the Border

When: Monday, February 18th, 12-1pm
Where: Room 205

What: A panel of Cardozo students will speak about their experiences volunteering with asylum seekers at the immigration detention center in Dilley, Texas.

Pasta and garlic bread will be served. We hope to see you there!

2L Info Session: Gearing up for a Postgrad Public Service Job Search

Part 1

Wednesday, February 20, 12-1 pm, Room 5Sem

2Ls-Think you might be interested in pursuing a postgraduate job in public service?

It is not too early to start thinking of your postgrad plans, as some application deadlines for postgraduate fellowships and other opportunities will come sooner than you may expect. Join us for Part 1 of a two-part series on all of the incredible opportunities to begin a public service career, where to find them, a timeline for when to apply, and how to make the best impression to get the job you want!

We'll cover postgraduate fellowships (both those in which you can design your own project, like Skadden and Equal Justice Works, and those that do not require a project to apply, like Immigrant Justice Corps), government honors programs, judicial clerkships, and much more!

Part 2 of the series will focus more intensively on project-based postgraduate fellowships.

Please RSVP on Symplicity.

Philosophy and Law Society General Body Meeting
2/22/19 -- 12pm-1pm
5sem
Philosophy and Law Society

Come join the Philosophy and Law Society at 12pm in 5sem for some pizza and phi-LAW-sophical discussion! The prompt for today's meeting is as follows:

Imagine World War III has just ended, and mankind has miraculously not destroyed itself. The general consensus is that every treaty previously signed to stop armed conflicts was woefully ineffective, and that the best decision is to scrap every treaty governing armed conflict from the Kellogg-Briand pact up until the present day (including, notably, Art. 1 & 2 of the UN Charter). Leaders understand and accept this to mean that pre-World War II theories, such as the right of conquest and uti possidetis among others, are now legal.

Is this paradigm shift justifiable? On what theories do you base your conclusion?

Now assume that, as a result of World War III, a population of super intelligent robots have taken over a large portion of central Canada and have organized themselves into an entirely new country named Robotistan. These robots are androids programmed with an intelligence level equal to or higher than humans, but they do not have human emotions and production of new robots is industrialized. Does this change your analysis of the new status quo?
