FALL 2021 SYMPOSIUM: Afghanistan - What's at Stake: National Security, Human Rights, and the Rule of Law

The Cardozo International & Comparative Law Review is pleased to host a virtual symposium on Thursday, October 21st, from 6:30 to 8:00 pm EST to discuss the rule of law crisis in Afghanistan. The symposium will focus on promoting the rule of law in conflict territories and will discuss Afghanistan as a case study. Panelists will discuss the history of the Afghan legal system and what were the obstacles to development. Is democracy a prerequisite to a rule of law system? How, if at all, did Afghanistan's 2004 Constitution change the legal landscape? Panelists will also discuss peacebuilding strategies and whether international law can be used as leverage over the Taliban, which is now in control of the government. If the Taliban thwarts monitoring efforts about suspected human rights violations, what can be done by the international community as a response?

Please register for our virtual panel below

Join us for a virtual panel with Mehdi Hakimi, Executive Director at the Rule of Law Program at Stanford Law School; Kimberly Motley, International Human Rights lawyer who has worked in Afghanistan since 2008; S. Ayse Kadayifci-Orellana, a research affiliate at the Georgetown Institute for Women, Peace and Security; Saeed Shajjan, Founder and Managing Partner at Shajjan & Associates; moderated by Deborah Pearlstein, Professor of Law and Co-Director of the Floersheimer Center for Constitutional Democracy at Cardozo Law School.

Cardozo Public Service Scholars, Cardozo Students for Human Rights, Cardozo Art Law Society, and The Cardozo Law Institute in Holocaust and Human Rights join together to present:

Illicit Art and Cultural Property Trafficking Across Borders

This panel will feature Dr. Patty Gerstenblith, Distinguished Research Professor at the DePaul University College of Law, Director of the Depaul University College of Law Center for Art, Museum & Cultural Heritage Law, and President of the Board of the U.S. Committee of the Blue Shield; Yaél Weitz, '09, of Kaye Spiegler PLLC, and; Toby Usnik, founder of Philanthropic Impact (π) and former Chief Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) Officer at Christie's. Michael McCullough, Cardozo professor and attorney at Pearlstein & McCullough LLP, will moderate. Panelists will discuss the international illicit cultural property and art trafficking market and its legal implications, focusing on the applications of international law and international human rights law. Special focus will be given to antiquities and indigenous property, as well as the relationship between art trafficking and armed conflict.

Join us on October 15 at 12:00 pm. The panel will be remote, but students are welcome to view the event in Room 1008. Come early if possible; coffee and pastries will be provided!

If viewing from home, please contact Cardozo Students for Human Rights to join their mailing list and access the link, if you are not on their mailing list already.

P*Law 2022 Planning Meeting

Wednesday, October 13 at 12 pm, Zoom

Join our P*LAW 2022 planning kickoff meeting to be a part of the Public Interest Law Advocacy Week (P*LAW) Student Planning team!

Cardozo's commitment to public service is highlighted every January during Public Interest Law Advocacy Week (P*LAW), a weeklong event that includes daily panels and workshops featuring inspiring conversations about the practice of public interest law.

During this student-led program, the Cardozo community buzzes with panelists, including legal practitioners and community advocates and organizers, who are invited by students to address important issues such as domestic violence, LGBTQ+ rights, prisoners' rights, immigration, education reform, youth representation, environmental law, and more!

Come and share your ideas and participate in organizing this incredible series of events! We will meet via Zoom, but we will have room 102 reserved for anyone who wants a quiet space where they can login/participate. Zoom login details will be provided by email to all students who RSVP via Symplicity.

Linking Concepts of Public Health, Mental Health, and Atrocity Prevention

October 13, 12:00PM ET

Registration Below

Questions: CLIHHR Program Coordinator Ali Cain

The Cardozo Law Institute in Holocaust and Human Rights published an edited volume entitled Public Health, Mental Health, and Mass Atrocity Prevention in August 2021. Our Digital Dialogue Series explores the various chapters in the book through panels with the contributing authors.

On October 13, 2021, at 12:00PM ET, CLIHHR will hold the first Series panel featuring the following authors:

Randle DeFalco is Assistant Professor of Law at University of Hawai'i at Mānoa William S. Richardson School of Law. His research focuses on international criminal law, especially how this body of law addresses harms brought about through unfamiliar causal processes, especially those that are slow or attritive in nature. He has also written on how aesthetic biases shape what forms of mass violence are and are not socially and legally conceptualized as international crimes.

Randle's recent scholarship has appeared or is forthcoming in the Southern California Interdisciplinary Law Journal, International Criminal Law Review, London Review of International Law, Fordham International Law Journal, University of Pennsylvania Journal of International Law, and Temple International and Comparative Law Journal

Laura Miller-Graff is Associate Professor of Psychology and Peace Studies at the University of Notre Dame. Her research examines the developmental effects of exposure to violence in childhood. With a focus on children who have multiple traumatic exposures, she investigates resulting patterns of resilience and psychopathology, including the development of posttraumatic stress symptoms. Her current research projects include the effects of intimate partner violence (IPV) on women and children's health and adjustment in the perinatal period factors contributing and the adaptation, development and evaluation of psychological interventions for violence-exposed pregnant women and for families living in settings of chronic violence. Working within an ecological framework, Laura's research seeks to understand how various systems (i.e., individual, family, and community) interact to promote or inhibit healthful development following violence exposure

Dr. Ellie Smith is a legal practitioner and academic with twenty years of experience in working with deeply vulnerable and traumatized individuals, as Head of Research for the UK's Immigration Advisory Service and Research Lead (Legal and Interdisciplinary) for the Medical Foundation for the Care of Victims of Torture (now "Torturecare"). She has expertise in the interactions of survivor needs and trauma within the justice system, including the impact of trauma on memory and testimony for the purpose of gathering, compiling and presenting legal evidence in court, and issues of victim participation and engagement. She holds a degree in Law from the University of Cambridge, a LLM from the London School of Economics and a PhD (Law and Psychology) from Bournemouth University

Jocelyn Getgen Kestenbaum is Associate Professor of Clinical Law at the Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law where she directs the Benjamin B. Ferencz Human Rights and Atrocity Prevention Clinic and the Cardozo Law Institute in Holocaust and Human Rights (CLIHHR). Her scholarship focuses on human rights, public health, and atrocity prevention, especially related to preventing and responding to sexual and gender-based crimes, slavery and the slave trade, indigenous rights, and human rights violations against minority groups. She holds a J.D. from Cornell Law School and an MPH from the John Hopkins University Bloomberg School of Public Health

CLE credit pending.

Zoom link will be sent out the morning of the panel via Eventbrite.
