"Rethinking Social Media", Thursday, January 31st, 6-8pm in the Moot Court Room

An expert discussion moderated by Professor Monroe Price

Join us for a discussion about the recent avalanche of efforts to reformulate social media relating to its sheer size, child pornography, cyberstalking, the augmentation of terrorist threats and hate speech, and, of course, the disturbance of US elections. This panel features leading young scholars dealing with developing Internet issues critical to society. Robyn Caplan is an Affiliate at Data and Society, Jessa Lingel is on the faculty of the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania, and Cardozo Professor Felix Wu's current work focuses on free expression and cybersecurity.

Featuring:

- Robyn Caplan, Affiliate, Data and Society
- Jessa Lingel, Professor, Annenberg School for Communications at the University of Pennsylvania
- Felix Wu, Professor, Cardozo School of Law
