The Heyman Center on Corporate Governance invites you to:

Combating Human Trafficking Through the Global Financial Sector

Monday, Nov. 1, 2021

12:00 - 1:15 pm

Room 525 and on Zoom - Lunch will be served

Cardozo Professor Barry Koch, a global leader in anti-trafficking efforts, will talk about his work as a Commissioner of the Financial Sector Commission to Combat Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking. The Commission, convened by the governments of Australia, The Netherlands and Liechtenstein, and Nobel laureate Muhammad Yunus, published its Blueprint for Mobilizing Finance Against Slavery and Trafficking at the United Nations General Assembly in 2019.

Professor Koch will discuss several of the Blueprint's goals, including how compliance professionals in the financial sector can "follow the money" to disrupt and dismantle the business of trafficking in persons. He will describe how he and his former compliance colleagues developed and implemented the first automated model in the banking industry to identify customer and transactional characteristics indicative of labor and sex trafficking.

Zoom link: Will be sent to those who register via Eventbrite and listed on the Eventbrite site

This event is open only to the Cardozo community. Registration is required.

Burns Center for Ethics in the Practice of Law presents

Lawyers Behaving Badly:

Episode 1 - The Executive Branch

Thursday, November 4, 2021

12:00 - 1:00 pm on Zoom

Zoom Webinar link will be sent to those who register via email on Nov. 3rd.

On November 4th, the Burns Center will host Cardozo Professor Kate Shaw for a discussion about the special risks that arise when lawyers advising the executive branch provide erroneous advice on matters of constitutional and federal law.

Prompting this program are the revelations that John Eastman - a former law school dean - and Assistant Attorney General Jeffrey Clark advised the White House that the results of the 2020 election could be set aside. What duties did Eastman and Clark owe as a matter of professional responsibility? Who can now respond to Eastman's and Clark's violations of those duties? Are the guardrails that constrain lawyers advising the executive branch sufficient? These and other questions will be addressed.

CLE Note: This online event is approved for 1.0 transitional/non-transitional New York State CLE credits in the category "Ethics and Professionalism". You must attend the "live" program in order to receive CLE credits.
