CAMPUS NEWS

Floersheimer Center Event Celebrates Professor Stanley Fish and Free Speech

Lively debates over the First Amendment sparked discussions between scholars and the public at the Floersheimer Center's daylong event "Hate Speech, Fake News, and Post-Truth in the Age of Trump." The conference celebrated Floersheimer Distinguished Visiting Professor Stanley Fish's latest book The First: How to Think About Hate Speech, Campus Speech, Religious Speech, Fake News, Post-Truth and Donald Trump (Atria Books, 2019).

Professor Jessica Roth Talks Impeachment on Bloomberg Radio

Professor Jessica Roth spoke on Bloomberg's Balance of Power about the impeachment process, saying, "What Pelosi is setting up now with this resolution she's bringing to the floor is to make it clear to any witness who would consider not complying with the subpoena because of what is essentially a political argument that the impeachment inquiry has not been authorized by the full house...she's trying to remove that argument."

Professor Ekow Yankah Interviewed on NPR

Professor Ekow Yankah discussed the announcement that the NCAA will allow college athletes to earn compensation. He said, "Like most people, we're all sort of waiting to see what the announcement means. The NCAA often tries to do the vaguely right thing when it has absolutely no other choice. So I take it that this is a capitulation of what they see coming down the pike in terms of a slew of laws that are passing from state to state and threatened federal action."

ACS Hosts "Rigged" Screening and Panel

Cardozo's chapter of the American Constitution Society hosted a screening of Rigged: The Voter Suppression Playbook. A panel discussion after the film, moderated by ACS chapter President and 2L student Isabella Pori, featured insightful commentary from Tim Smith, the film's executive producer, Professor Matthew Seligman and John Cusick, a fellow at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.
