"Rethinking Social Media"

An expert discussion moderated by Professor Monroe Price
Thursday, January 31st, 6-8pm
Moot Court Room

Sponsored by the Cardozo Moot Court Honor Society and the Howard M. Squadron Program in Law, Media, and Society.

Join us for a discussion about the recent avalanche of efforts to reformulate social media relating to its sheer size, child pornography, cyberstalking, the augmentation of terrorist threats and hate speech, and, of course, the disturbance of US elections. This panel features leading young scholars dealing with developing Internet issues critical to society. Robyn Caplan is a Researcher at Data and Society, Jessa Lingel is on the faculty of the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania, and Cardozo Professor Felix Wu's current work focuses on free expression and cybersecurity.
