Three Steps Forward, Two Steps Back: The Quagmire of Citizenship in India

Monday, October 26. 12:00PM-1:00PM ET

India's Register of Citizens (NRC) lays out a strategy that effectively singles out and expels religious minority communities. Because of these processes, over 1.9 million people currently stand to lose rights, protections, and nationality. Effectively, this process is the largest disenfranchisement exercise in recent human history. The UN Office Of The High Commissioner For Human Rights and other civil rights defenders already have sounded the alarm, identifying clear and unsettling parallels to historical incidents of government-led mass exclusion, persecution, and erasure of populations.

Join Ramya Jawahar Kudekallu (Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law), Padmini Baruah (Justice and Liberty Initiative) and Darshana Mitra (Parichay) for a conversation on India's complicated history with immigration in the state of Assam and the country's current directives against people from ethno-religious minority communities.

Padmini Baruah (they/them) is a graduate student at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, and a member of the Justice and Liberty Initiative, a Guwahati-based human rights group that advocates for the rights of those whose citizenship is under threat in Assam. Their research focuses on gender, migration, and statelessness. In the past, they have worked for the Abdul Latif Jameel Poverty Action Lab at MIT, and the Henry J. Leir Institute for Human Security.

Darshana Mitra (she/her) is the co-founder of Parichay, a collaborative legal aid clinic set up to assist persons excluded from the National Register of Citizens in Assam, India. She graduated from the West Bengal National University of Juridical Sciences in 2012 and subsequently worked at the Alternative Law Forum, where she focused on issues concerning immigration law, child rights, gender, and sexuality. Darshana is a Fulbright-Nehru Scholar and completed her LL.M at Columbia Law School as the Human Rights Fellow at the Human Rights Institute. She currently teaches at West Bengal National University of Juridical Sciences.

Ramya Jawahar Kudekallu (she/her) is a Visiting Instructor of Clinic Law and CLIHHR's Telford Taylor Teaching Fellow. Her work focuses on the rights of minorities and atrocity prevention through international intervention. In 2018, Ramya graduated from Fordham School of Law with an LL.M in International Law and Justice. Later that year, she secured the Crowley Fellowship with the Leitner Center for International Law. She's taught a Human Rights Scholarship class and has conducted research on labor, gender-based discrimination and access to justice.

Public Service Scholars' Lunchtime Discussion: 19th Amendment Centennial

Monday, October 26th, 12:30pm-1:30pm

SPONSORING GROUP: Public Service Scholars

2020 marks the 100th anniversary of the passage of the Nineteenth Amendment, which gave women the right to vote. Professor Kate Shaw will walk through its history, in conversation with Ihaab Syed, Fellow at the ACLU's Voting Rights Project, who will situate this history with the ongoing fight against voter suppression of communities of color. Ihaab will also provide a practitioner's perspective on what it means to do this work on the ground today.

Practicing Housing Law in New York

October 27, 2020

6pm

Interested in housing law in New York? Please join Cardozo School of Law's Public Interest Law Students Association for a panel on October 27 at 6pm. We will be speaking with three housing law attorneys about their career paths, their experiences at their current organizations, and the effects of COVID-19 on the practice of housing law in New York.

Moderator: Professor Leslie Newman

Panelists include:

Justin La Mort ('10)

Supervising Attorney at Mobilization for Justice, which provides direct civil legal assistance, community education, policy advocacy, and impact litigation. Its housing work includes helping people facing eviction or foreclosure and advocating for Manhattan Seniors, Single Room Occupancy Tenants, Three-Quarter House Tenants, and people with mental illness. Prior to working at Mobilization for Justice, Attorney La Mort worked at CAMBA Legal Services.

Justin Brown

Senior Staff Attorney in the Tenants' Rights Units at New York Legal Assistance Group (NYLAG), which provides direct legal advocacy, policy advocacy, community education, and impact litigation in over a dozen areas. NYLAG's work in Tenants' Rights includes representing clients in Housing Court eviction cases, advocating before administrative agencies, obtaining and preserving rent subsidies, and preserving safe and affordable housing. Prior to working at NYLAG, Attorney Brown was a Dean's Fellow at the Feerick Center for Social Justice at Fordham Law.

Idalys Nunez

Housing Attorney at Lenox Hill Neighborhood House, which provides direct legal advocacy, policy advocacy, educational programming, and recreational services. The housing attorneys advocate for individuals and families facing eviction and help seniors and people with disabilities secure rent increase exemptions. Prior to working at Lenox Hill, Attorney Nunez was a Dean's Fellow at the Fordham Center on Law and Information Policy.

Panel Discussion: Lawyer Discipline and Executive Branch Lawyers

Thursday, October 29 at 4:30 p.m.

The actions of Attorney General William Barr are controversial. Concerns have been expressed that he has violated the DC Rules of Professional Conduct (where he has been admitted). The gravamen of complaints against Barr are (1) that he has engaged in dishonesty or conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice, including by making false statements of fact and law; and (2) he has failed his client – the People of the United States – by preferring the interests of a non-client (President Trump) and/or by using government power to promote partisan political interests. This panel will review both of these possible concerns.

This panel will also explore the prudential arguments for and against using bar discipline as a response to what might be, ultimately, a matter of political disagreement among lawyers about the conduct of one of their own. It will also consider where the lines are, and should be, drawn between legitimate uses of government prosecutorial power and illegitimate partisan uses, and how DOJ's politicization of its power should be policed, and by whom.

Panelists:

Bruce Green, Louis Stein Chair and Director of the Stein Center for Law and Ethics, Fordham Law School

Thomas D. Morgan, Oppenheim Professor Emeritus of Antitrust and Trade Regulation Law, George Washington University Law School

Rebecca Roiphe, Trustee Professor of Law and Co-Dean for Faculty Scholarship, New York Law School

Moderator:

Anthony Sebok, Professor of Law and Co-Director, Jacob Burns Center for Ethics in the Practice of Law, Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law
