The Center for Rights and Justice presents:

The Constitutional Right of Private Citizens to Video Record the NYPD in Public

This event will feature panelists, attorneys Cynthia Cook and Joshua Carrin of the ACLU, to speak about the First Amendment right of private citizens to use their camera phones to video record the NYPD performing their professional duties in public. The attorneys represent Ruben An, a private citizen who was arrested for recording police officers. He is suing the city seeking a declaratory judgment that his actions are protected by the Constitution.
