Sarah Chu, Director of Policy & Reform at Perlmutter Center for Legal Justice, Speaks to Daily News About NYPD Fingerprint Controversy

“A false positive is considered a nearly catastrophic event in the forensics community,” Chu said. “If you want to understand what led to the error, you have to go backward in time.”

Professor Andrea Schneider Quoted in the Los Angeles Times on SAG-AFTRA Strike Negotiations Stalling

“We will see how fast [the studios] can get back to the table,” Schneider said. “They’ve made progress and I don’t think either side wants to throw that all away.”

Professor Emmanuel Arnaud Featured in The Appellate Project for Their Latino Heritage Month Celebration

“Representation is important not just for the diverse approaches and perspectives on cases but also as a signal to other people that look like you—that they, too, can work in the appellate field,” Arnaud said.

Professor Edward Zelinsky Pens Piece for Tax Notes on the Case for Taxing Nonprofit Hospitals

“Nonprofit hospitals, like all lucrative vested interests, will fiercely defend their tax exempt status,” Zelinsky writes. “But ultimately, today’s nonprofit hospital is a commercial enterprise that should be taxed like its for-profit competitors.”
