Cardozo professors have this month begun a program designed to help Eastern Europeans understand American corporate and commercial law.

A program jointly sponsored by Cardozo's Heyman Center on Corporate Governance, the University of Budapest (Eotvos Lorand) Law School, and the Karl Marx University of Economics ("certainly the first collaboration among representatives of Justice Cardozo, Eotvos Lorand, and Karl Marx," smiles Cardozo Professor Charles Yablon), the spring endeavor represents the first time that courses on the legal regulation of a market economy will be offered by American lawyers in a Hungarian law school.

Students will be law students from Eotvos Lorand Law School (particularly those specializing in foreign trade law), economics students form the Karl Marx University of Economics in Budapest, and practicing Hungarian lawyers. The Eotvos Lorand law school has sent 3,000 letters to young Hungarian lawyers, informing them of the program and inviting them to attend these lectures.

The Program's directors are Professor Gabor Hamza, of Eotvos Lorand; Cardozo's Professor David Rudenstine, and Cardozo Dean Monroe Price. The faculty includes Cardozo Professors Charles Yablon, Michel Rosenfeld, and Arthur Jacobson; the Honorable Alexander Kozinski of the U.S. Court of Appeal, Ninth Circuit; Richard Wiley, former Chair of the FCC; and Susan Liebeler, former Chair of the International Trade Court.

The program has already attracted national attention. Dean Price and Professor Yablon have been asked to participate in the ABA/AID Joint Committee designing future law-related efforts in Eastern Europe. A description of the program was featured in the Wall Street Journal.

What makes this program unique and "particularly challenging," says Professor Yablon, "is that the focus will not be on teaching American business law (obviously of little use to Hungarians) but rather to attempt to show Hungarians how American business lawyers think about regulation of markets, and how they approach legal problems in a business setting in a manner which combines the application of legal, financial, and commercial expertise."

Eastern European lawyers find, says Yablon, that "American lawyers, particularly business lawyers, tend to think about legal rules not in terms of what they permit or prohibit, but in terms of the incentives they create or the transaction costs they impose."

Establishing environmental pollution regulation is a process Eastern Europeans are most interested in learning from the West.
WALB Symposium on Battered Women

The Women's Annotated Legal Bibliography and Cardozo sponsored a March 27th symposium entitled "The Defense of the Battered Woman", featuring Ellen Yaroshefsky, Esq. and Michael Dowd, Esq., both of whom specialize in criminal justice, and Julie Blackman, Ph.D., a forensic psychologist.

Law and Humanism Speakers Series To Run Through May

A speakers series, co-sponsored by Cardozo and the New School for Social Research, began on November 8th and will run through May 3rd. The series coordinators are Cardozo Professors Drucilla Cornell and Arthur Jacobson, and New School Professor Agnes Heller. The series includes: "Justice as Fairness" by Harvard’s John Rawls on November 8th; "Moses the Egyptian: Sigmund Freud and Zora Neale Hurston" by Stanford’s Barbara Johnson on February 5th; "On Transforming the American Mind" by Duke’s Henry Louis Gates (postponed, date to be announced); "Building Blocks of Power" by Yale’s Bruce Ackerman on March 1st; "Algorithms of Justice" by CUNY’s Alan Wolfe on March 8th; "Resisting Theory" by Cornell’s Jonathan Culler on March 26th; "An Enchanted Past: An Introduction to the Semiotics of Common Law" by the University of Lancaster’s Peter Goodrich on March 29th; "Irigaray and Women’s Truth" by Brown’s Elizabeth Weed on April 23rd; and "The Literary Study of Midrash" by Yale’s Geoffrey Hartman on May 3rd.

International Evidence Workshop

Professor Peter Tillers hosted an International Evidence Workshop at Cardozo on January 25th. Entitled “The Structure of Fact Investigation in Litigation”, the workshop featured Professor Tillers and Dr. David Schum, professor of information and technology and systems engineering at George Mason University.

Professor Tillers, Director of Cardozo’s International Seminar on Evidence and Litigation and Dr. Schum, a former consultant to the Analytic Methodology Research Division of the Central Intelligence Agency, have collaborated on a number of research papers and articles, in addition to be awarded a National Science Foundation grant for their project “The Marshalling of Evidence and the Structuring of Argument.”

In March, the workshop hosted USC’s Prof. Ward Edwards on “Influence Diagrams in Hierarchical Inference” and John Jackson of the Queen’s University of Belfast on "Judicial Interventionism in Criminal Trials.”

Cardozo Studies in Law and Literature Publishes Second Issue

A Message from the Chairman of the Board

"Law is not just business," says Jacob Burns, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Cardozo, "it permeates all of life. Before students graduate from law school, they should understand the rights, and the obligations, which emanate from their citizenship in the United States."

Students at Cardozo, says Mr. Burns, "are more sophisticated than the average. Their training in morals and ethics has an influence on the entire student body."

Jacob Burns, an attorney specializing in corporate law as well as estates and trusts, is Vice Chairman of the Committee on Character and Fitness of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of the State of New York. He is an active philanthropist whose interests, in addition to the law school and Yeshiva University, include The George Washington University and B’nai B’rith Hillel Foundations.

Mr. Burns finds Cardozo "unique. The dean and faculty make an extraordinary effort create interest in the students — to make the study of law enjoyable, to bring out the 'romance' of law and its effects on our daily lives. Each year, I see Cardozo's students quickly engulfed in this attitude, and this creates a demand to know more about how law affects humanity and relationships between people."

Squadron Program Focuses on Cable Television

"Cable Television: The Race to Regulate" was the subject of a one-day symposium held on March 16th, sponsored by Cardozo's Howard M. Squadron Program in Law, Media and Society and the Cardozo Arts and Entertainment Law Journal.

The morning session, entitled "Competition, Antitrust and the First Amendment: Further Intertwining" features Cardozo Professor (on leave) and Director of the New York City Bureau of Franchise John I. Hanks, Cardozo Dean Monroe Price and Professor Lawrence H. Winer of the Arizona State Law School.

The afternoon, focusing on “The 1984 Act: Where We Go From Here”, featured Norman M. Sinel, a partner with Arnold & Porter; Cardozo Adjunct Professor Michael I. Meyerson; Stuart Robinowitz, partner with Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison; and Frank W. Lloyd, partner with Mintz, Levin, Cohn, Ferris, Glovsky & Popeo.

"The Economics of Broadcast Television and Cable Systems" was the focus on a March 28th discussion, part of an ongoing "Conversation Series" with Howard Squadron, senior partner with Squadron, Ellenoff, Plesent & Lehrer. Mr. Squadron's guest was I. Martin Pompadur, who, via private and public limited partnerships, is involved in the operation of network-affiliated TV stations, U.S. Cable, and FM and AM radio stations.

Chutick Law Library Offers Interactive Video Education

Connecting together a laser disk video player, a computer, keyboard, and two monitors, and software, the library’s new interactive video program, called Veralex, debuted in December.

The program, produced by Harvard and Wake Forest law schools, provides a "movie" depicting a trial. The student, watching the trial proceed, can "object", via the computer program. The video stops, and the computer asks the student to explain the objection. A correct answer moves the "trial" on.

"There are civil and criminal trials," says the Library’s Director, Lynn Wishart, "as well as negotiations and mediations. It’s an excellent way to learn. It’s not theory, it’s the theory put to practice in reality."

The program, relatively new and not available yet at many law schools, was utilized by Cardozo’s ITAP (Intensive Trial Advocacy Program) during intersession and will be a valuable tool for other clinics, as well as evidence and other courses.
