The creation of a Commission on Prosecutorial Conduct in 2019 would make New York the first state with an independent body to address complaints about the conduct of its prosecutors.

This panel will discuss the constitutional, legal, and policy issues raised by the legislation creating the Commission.

We also will discuss the lobbying effort to pass the legislation, the pending litigation challenging it, and amendments made to the law before the amended bill was signed by Governor Cuomo on March 27, 2019.
