For the third year in a row, Cardozo's Intellectual Property Law Society ('IPLS') has been chosen as the New York City host of the World Intellectual Property Organization's World IP Day! WIPO recently announced the global theme for the event, which is Powering Change: Women in Innovation and Creativity.

To not only celebrate but advance this theme, IPLS will proudly introduce the Cardozo/Google Project for Patent Diversity, a project funded by a $200,000 grant from Google. The goal of the Project is to increase the number of U.S. patents issued to women and minorities.

Professor Jeanne C. Curtis joined Cardozo's nationally-ranked IP program this year to spearhead the effort. At World IP Day, Professor Curtis will be joined by a panel of experts to discuss the Project as well as other initiatives underway across law, business, and policy that are directed to achieving parity in innovation and creativity; the social and economic benefits of achieving parity; and the ways each and every one of us on a daily basis can help affect change.
