Subject: [May 18th] Public Panel event- International Law and National Security

Dear Faculty Members,

On Thursday, May 18, from 6:00- 7:30 pm, Cardozo Law School will be the place to be for a truly unique, exciting and essential program for anyone interested in the application of international law to national security.

This event, organized by the ICRC and Cardozo Law Institute in Holocaust and Human Rights, will feature some of the most active and respected experts in the field from abroad. The panel, International Law and National Security: A View from Abroad on Current Trends in Targeting, Detention, and Trials, will be moderated by one of the US's equally respected practitioners and academics in the field, Professor Beth Van Schaack of Stanford Law School.

For further information, including how to RSVP, please see the flyer attached. We hope you can spread the word to your students, professionals in the field, and others who might be interested. There will be a reception after the event. We're excited!

All the best,

Susan Braden
