Daniel Ramos (SJD) is a Federal Judge in Brazil since 2005, serving at the 6^o Circuit (Minas Gerais). Over the years, he issued opinions in cases relating to administrative, constitutional, criminal, tax, enforcement, and international law. In 2010 he introduced alternative dispute resolution techniques to environmental law issues related to iron mining in the State of Minas Gerais - Brazil, which motivated him to deepen his studies in the doctorate program in environmental law at Pace Law School - New York, concluded in 2021. Additionally, he earned his master's degree in public law from the Federal University Of Minas Gerais and published the book Protecting the Citizen's Legitimate Expectations (2019). His article, "ENVIRONMENTAL DISPUTE RESOLUTION IN BRAZIL: NEW PATHS AND LESSONS FROM THE U.S. LEGAL EXPERIENCE" analyzes the Brazilian legal framework of Environmental Dispute Resolution ("EDR"), taking into account its ability to ensure the effectiveness of environmental protection and compares it with United States' legal mechanisms of Alternative Dispute Resolution ("ADR"). The article also assesses the mechanisms for resolving one of the world's largest environmental law conflict, arising from the collapse of the mining tailings dam in Mariana - Minas Gerais, in 2015 and discusses the possibility of innovation by legal instruments, techniques, and a collaborative approach that would strengthen the effectiveness of Brazilian environmental law.

MyeongHwan Cha is a 3L at Cardozo School of Law. For the 2022-2023 academic year, MyeongHwan serves as a Notes Editor for Volume 24 of the Cardozo Journal of Conflict Resolution. The prior year, MyeongHwan served as a Staff Editor for Volume 23 of the Journal. His Note, "Extra Life: An ODR Mediation System as a Moderation Tool for Live Streaming Platforms," provides background context regarding the current state of live streaming and platform moderation practices. The Note then covers the concerns of such moderation practices, why an ODR mediation system is beneficial, and a preliminary framework of an ODR system appropriate within the live streaming context. The Note concludes by discussing all parties' interests in implementing an online dispute resolution system capable of providing various levels of mediation services and its potential challenges.

Stephanie Schatz Leavitt is a 3L student at Cardozo School of Law and serves as Managing Editor for Volume 24 of the Cardozo Journal of Conflict Resolution. Last year, Stephanie served as a Staff Editor for Volume 23 of the Journal. Her Note, "Alternative Dispute Resolution in Child Sexual Abuse Cases: Approaches for Minimizing Victimization," analyzes the recently enacted New York legislation, The Child Victims Act, and suggests a proposal to utilize restorative justice methods to serve the victims of child sexual abuse who have sought to take legal action against their offenders. The Note further discusses the benefits and drawbacks of various methods of alternative dispute resolution as well as the formal litigation or prosecutorial route.

Joshua Becker is a 3L student at Cardozo School of Law. For the 2022-2023 academic year, he is a member of Cardozo Law's ADR mediation Clinic. His article, "The Semiconductor Industry's Need For Better Negotiation to Combat China's Rise," outlines the current public and private developments in the global and domestic semiconductor market, addresses the initiatives of new U.S. and Chinese law, and details important negotiation strategies for joint venture partnerships in China.

Elad Michael graduated from Cardozo School of Law in May 2022 with LL.M. Over the 2021–2022 academic year, Elad served as a Staff Editor for Volume 23 of the Cardozo Journal of Conflict Resolution.

The Executive Board of the Journal would like to extend its deepest gratitude to each and every Staff Editor and Editorial Board member who worked so diligently on editing the Articles and Notes for this issue.
