Professor Sebok Quoted in Financial Times

Professor Tony Sebok was quoted in the Financial Times, discussing the litigation likely to increase due to COVID-19 issues. He said, "I don't see this as a looming tsunami of liability. There's a big difference between saying hypothetically speaking that a tort claim can be brought and finding a lawyer who will invest their time and energy in a suit."

In addition, "there could be some kind of victim compensation fund, much as one was set up after 9/11, which would pay out to victims who waive lawsuits."
