Can Legal Reform Fix Policing?

Tuesday, July 28 at 7 p.m.

In the wake of the recent murders of George Floyd and Breonna Taylor and against the backdrop of countless other similar tragedies, state, local and federal law makers have proposed, and in some cases enacted, laws aimed at holding police accountable and decreasing police violence and racist or otherwise unjust law enforcement. Join Cardozo Professors Betsy Ginsberg, Kate Levine, Kathryn Miller, Jonathan Oberman, Ngozi Okidegbe, Alex Reinert and Ekow Yankah for a discussion about some of these legal reforms and their potential impact on policing.
