Fall 2020 Symposium:

Strategies and Tactics of Human Rights Advocacy During a Global Pandemic

Thursday, November 19, 2020

12 p.m.

The Cardozo International & Comparative Law Review is pleased to host a virtual symposium to address how justice-seeking movements and organizations have been impacted by the crises created by COVID-19 and how they have had to respond with different methods to further their work.

Panelists will identify what tools are proving most effective in their responses and what role lawyers and advocates can play to curb deepened and emerging justice challenges. The panelists will address how they have changed their legal approaches to advocacy or direct representation in their different fields during the global pandemic and how this might affect future international human rights advocacy strategies and litigation in the future.

Moderator: Ramya Kudekallu, Telford Taylor Teaching Fellow and Visiting Instructor of Clinical Law at the Cardozo Law Institute in Holocaust and Human Rights.

Panelists:

Anita Sinha, Associate Professor of Law and the Director of the International Human Rights Law Clinic at American University, Washington College of Law

Eric Tars, Legal Director, National Homelessness Law Center

Katie Czapanskiy, Staff Attorney, Human Rights First Refugee Representation team, Los Angeles office

Suzannah Phillips, Deputy Director of Women Enabled International

Rajesh Umadevi Srinivas, Executive Director of Sangama

Note on New York State CLE Credit: The symposium has been approved for 1.5 transitional/non-transitional New York State CLE credits in the category “Areas of Professional Practice.” You must attend the “live” program in order to receive CLE credits. We cannot award CLE credits for watching a recorded version of this program. If you are planning on receiving CLE credit, please register for a free CLE ticket for the event. Otherwise, please register for a general registration ticket for the event and you will be sent the Zoom information.
