Black Mirror is an Emmy Award-Winning British anthology TV series that explores near-term techno-dystopias. How close are we to living and working in a Black Mirror world? Many of the episodes highlight cases of AI running amok, involving implantable devices in the body, drone artificial insects, new forms of social media, and novel types of AI-enhanced consciousness, all of which are capable of being hacked, manipulated or controlled in unintended ways. As practicing lawyers in a world of emerging AI apps, we all may be expected to provide advice to a range of corporate and public sector clients on the novel legal issues posed by this new technological landscape. Distinguished speakers will lead a lively session, as we explore the “creepier” aspects of the coming world of AI, and will discuss the legal and ethical issues that we may soon all be facing.
